In November 1973, I examined items 128 and 129 and judged neither to fit the criteria for documents to be made available for inspection by IBM. I further concluded that both warranted a security classification because they contained classified attachments -- in particular, copies of classified CIA reports. If these attachments were removed, however, the reports could be declassified.

2. Item 50 was somehow overlooked in the screening process and may have some relevance to the case. I examined it this morning STATINTL and do not feel it warrants a security classification. I have therefore declassified it.
